Market Review

US Dollar Index:

– 95.21)

Markets nose dived last Friday. Looked to me like they were concerned about both rising interest rates and anticipating the turn in the polls away from Clinton – another reason why I think what is happening to Clinton reflects a loss of support from the top. More on that later.

Fixed Income:

JNK 11.28%

Is the long term bond bull over? – my vote is yes. Been talking about it for two years while bonds have done well. But it is only a matter of time. Question is how slow or fast? No way to tell. But it has begun. Now that it is over, question is who has bought up control of the planet? Other than the central banks....

All eyes on Fed next week. My expectation is they will not bump interest rates – with intimate that they will bump in December.

Keep Calm and Do the Math

By Catherine Austin Fitts

It's time to take a deep breath and listen to the American people.

Our concerns have been smothered over by the media "shriek-o-meter" and government promises like thick gravy poured on an entrée that no one wants to really taste. All the mathematical systems we use to communicate — from market prices to voting booths to official statistics — are manipulated. So we are escalating our cries.

Let's pierce through the passion and diversity of opinions and look at the fundamental mathematics of government budgets and economics (what I refer to as, "how the money works") to "grok" the deeper message:

- Our time and health is increasingly wasted: Labor productivity has been rising until recently. However, productivity outside of work has been falling. The reasons are endless: Overly complex government systems and rules and regulations. Financial fraud, bailouts and financial coup d'état. Debasement of the food systems, the environment and the currency. Surveillance capitalism. If I go to work and am efficient at generating corporate profits, and then come home and lose hours to poor transportation infrastructure, identify theft, illness resulting from GMO food and global spraying, and predatory and invasive government regulation and corporate practices, how is productivity increased?

- Growth in labor productivity has not been shared: As labor productivity has grown since 1970, hourly compensation has flat lined. The economic benefits have gone to investors or been skimmed out through the back door.
- Inequality has grown primarily as a result of rigging voting booth, markets and government budgets and enforcement, including with covert operations. The average person is too busy to understand the details. However, we have observed enough about trillions of dollars missing from the US government, the rich contracts related to foreign wars and $27 trillion of bailouts to have complete confidence that our existing government and financial institutions are without concern for the law or fundamental economics.
- For those of us who follow what is happening globally we are appalled at what we see. As Richard Dolan explained recently, the United States has become “Shiva” – the destroyer of worlds.
- There is a stink emitting from current events. Strange deaths that result in a changing Supreme Court composition. CDC proposals for sweeping police state powers in the face of manufactured epidemics. False flags and fake mass shootings.
- To quote The Economist, America’s aristocracy is calcifying. Decades of government bailouts and quantitative easing has produced a leadership class that got rich and happy inflicting their unipolar vision on the world, but can not cooperate and compete effectively in a multi-polar world. Our enemies don’t fear us and our allies don’t respect us. The general population smells failure in the air.

The voting population has had it. After decades of voting for candidates who promised change, they are indeed prepared to vote for candidates who will blow the system up. If a system has a negative return on investment, why make it more efficient? Why not, instead, do whatever you can to ensure it fails?

To deal with the groundswell of frustration, the centralizers of political power have turned the manufacture and distribution of disinformation into one of the largest industries on the planet. Divide and conquer politics is one of the principal tactics, designed to make sure the various constituencies will not unite against the small centralized group that is harvesting them all.

What is remarkable is that the perpetrators of these divide and conquer hatreds and myths have now fallen prey to their own fictions.

Hillary Clinton's now famous words referring to approximately 25% of the American people as deplorable were surprising, even to me. How could a candidate for President with decades of experience in national politics make such a gaffe? Worse yet, how could someone who has engaged in multiple, documented felonies, not to mention leading the destruction and collapse of Libya and Haiti, among other places destroyed by disaster capitalism, refer to half of Trump's supporters as "deplorable?"

Apparently, opinions among the working poor considered unfashionable among the multicultural rich are far worse than breaking the law or slaughtering millions of people. My vote is that Clinton be indicted for one of her many felonies and sentenced to five years working as a cleaning lady at a Super 8 motel in Mena, Arkansas, or better yet the equivalent in Benghazi. Then let's see what she has to say about who's "deplorable" after a serious stint at earning an honest living.

But hold on to your pants. Clinton's gaffe of last weekend was topped this week by Alan Greenspan who is actively competing for the title of top evildoer of the American financial establishment. After actively leading the financial coup d'état, including many trillions missing from US government accounts, the pump and dump of the stock market, the housing bubble and government and mortgage securities fraud that produced $27 trillion in bailouts, Greenspan has announced that crazies are undermining the U.S. system. This was after announcing that productivity growth threatened our ability to meet our retirement obligations, the implication being that his $40 trillion financial coup d'état was not a problem. You and I could spend a lifetime searching Greenspan's heart and mind at a subatomic particle level and never find a hint of personal responsibility or shame.

While it has always been obvious that Clinton and Greenspan assume that we can't do the math on what is happening, it is becoming increasingly apparent that rigged market prices, phony government statistics and hacked voting rolls have lulled them in to also losing their grip on reality.

If you and I can see this, so the entire world can also see this. Time to do the math on how the members of the G-20 can make money exploiting our collective insanity – because that is what is coming.

Part of the Establishment melt down – Gallup poll shows trust in corporate media at an all time low – Frankly, I am amazed that it is above 0%.

GLOBALIZATION

Martin Wolf – Financial Times on globalization

Does globalisation's stalling matter? Yes. The era of globalisation has seen the first fall in global inequality of household incomes since the early 19th century. Between 1980 and 2015, average global real income rose by 120 per cent. The opportunities afforded by globalisation are vital. Our future cannot lie in closing ourselves off from one another.

The failure — a profound one — lies in not ensuring that gains were more equally shared, notably within high-income economies. Equally dismal was the failure to cushion those adversely affected. But we cannot stop economic change. Moreover, the impact on jobs and wages of rising productivity and new technologies has far exceeded that of rising imports. Globalisation must not be made a scapegoat for all our ills.

Yet it has now stalled, as have the policies driving it. It might reverse. Yet even a stalling would slow economic progress and reduce opportunities for the world's poor. Pushing globalisation forward requires different domestic and external policies from those of the past. Globalisation's future depends on better management. Will that happen? Alas, I am not optimistic.

Let's Go to the Movies

In Let's Go to the Movies, I will review Jason Bourne, the latest addition to the Bourne action film series. I love the series and was delighted to see a new one coming out. Like The A Team and many of the action films recommended here, the message is clear and compelling — the system is too corrupt; we must find our own way in this world. The Bourne quest is the search for a free and inspired life.

By Catherine Austin Fitts

This week on the Solari Report, I will speak with Sofia Smallstorm, author and publisher of Avatar Update and About the Sky.

I am a devoted subscriber of Avatar Update. If I am interested in the flow of money within a place or industry, Sofia is keenly interested in the flow of materials, assets and people. She has a remarkable ability to see through the matrix into the heart of things. If all the world, as Shakespeare once wrote, is a stage, Sofia is uniquely gifted at sleuthing out how the sets are built and why and what our puppet masters may try to achieve.

Sofia’s insights are particularly strong regarding invisible technologies of control. In this Solari Report we speak about the integrated impact of EMF, global spraying, media entrainment and subliminal programming and the involuntary reengineering of our human bodies and chemistry. What is this high-tech cocktail doing to influence our individual and our collective minds? We also touch on fake mass shootings – a more bizarro version of false flags.

In Money & Markets this week I will discuss the latest in financial and geopolitical news, including rumors that major changes are afoot in the economy and global financial system.

ASK CATHERINE

Hi Catherine--

Breaking news on my local TV station (KATU)--

An elementary school in Oregon City, Oregon is using kids' fingerprints to identify them in the school lunch line. Parents were not notified! Many parents are upset, and the ACLU is apparently getting involved, asking:

Exactly who has the fingerprints,?
Where they are going to be kept?
For how long?
etc.....

The school is defending this procedure, claiming it will move the kids along the school lunch line faster.

HHHHHMMMMMM?????!!!!!!

Thanks for your input.

Hi Catherine,

I wanted to send this article to you, I found it quite interesting regarding the population of the areas targeted, thought you might also.

This small Indiana County sends more people to prison than San Francisco and Durham, NC, combined. Why?

Don't know – I suspect they are trying to keep drug gangs from taking root.

Hi Catherine,

I've been a subscriber for six months and have enjoyed your interviews. Since you introduced me to the concept of entrainment I have grown more skeptical of media and entertainment.

As much as I like the idea of "girl power" and the positive message of achieving your goals, I could help be be suspect of this shows concept and the timing of the premiere launch so close to the election.

Curious to know if you share the same opinion or if I have misunderstood entrainment technology, methods or techniques.

Dear Catherine,

My name is XXX and I subscribe to your newsletter and reports. I am wanting to pull my money out of the banks at this time like the rest of us. I am also following your other suggestions but find I still have excess in my bank accounts. My question is this. Is there any reason one could not simply get cashier's checks made out to themselves from their bank account – some for smaller amounts at 10k or less each and then larger ones at 50k or more each and store them in a safe place to ride out the storm. If the banks seized money from all of the account holders would this not be a way to protect your money as banks are more likely to give you a cashier's check then cash? I appreciate that this is not something you would likely be able to post for the obvious reasons but I would really appreciate your thoughts. When the banks became solvent again you could simply deposit one or more of your previously drawn cashier's checks. I can assure you that any answer you provide will be held in utmost confidentiality.

If you want to be independent of the banks, have cash and gold and silver coins outside.

I think there is little chance of a bank seizing your money. If they are seizing funds, they can seize your funds when you try to liquefy your cashiers check.

Catherine -

Maybe you've heard this already? The news keeps getting more bizarre. Now there is evidence of glyphosate in vaccines. Injecting kids (and adults, I'm sure) with glyphosate even indirectly is insane. See link below.

Link that you sent was gone from Yahoo, but found it elsewhere and will post.

Not suprising Mr. Global wants to churn Monsanto's name and balance sheet.

On another note, in the 9/8 discussions, you mentioned the possibility of a link between channeled material and secret societies intelligence and/or intelligence agencies. (I might be paraphrasing incorrectly as I'm still in a bit of shock.) Thank you for that information. For a long time I've been both curious and cautious about channeled material, but it never occurred to me that those groups would come into play. How can I learn more (or should I)?

Start learning about mind control and then go to psychic warfare and psy ops. – I would get a general back ground on the fundamentals of invisible influence first. I don't know of good source material that focuses on channeled materials. Make sure you read Rappoport's the Secret of Secret Societies.

List I recently sent a professor interested in the topic:

Bernard Lewis, The Assassins
Carla Emory, Secret Don't Tell

The Nazi's contributed to the modern version - dip into Operation Paperclip if you want more for the scientists who came over and helped kickstart MK Ultra.

Once the secret societies got access to infinite amounts of funding through the intelligence agencies, things really took off.

For a sense of where this has now gone, dip into experience of people who have been targeted

Hi Catherine and Dr. Farrell:

Nations are like individuals: when we encounter the bad results of our own choices often enough, we realize our discomfort or failure is of our own making. And we learn.

Such a moment of awakening, IMO, is happening for Americans.

We are realizing that we create our own reality:

Why? because this election displays blatantly who and what we have become, and it is embarrassing:

There is a subplot, if you will, to Hillary's poor health:

I think we are seeing the beginning of the scenario we have been expecting: one of the candidates will not make it to the finish line, and, if you sense the deep anguish of the country over her criminal behavior and Trump's craziness, you can appreciate that the American people really have mixed feelings about this election... meaning many simply wish it would not happen and would welcome an event that radically changes it. Her failure to finish the race may be fulfilling a secret wish of the populace: we really do not want this farce to continue. When a nation's most cherished exercise in representative democracy - a presidential election - reflects back to us something we cannot be proud of no matter how hard we try, we begin to question ourselves. We begin to own that we have allowed or created a situation/condition to develop in our national identity that is not worthy of keeping any more. Many are quietly or openly asking themselves, "Is this the best we can do?" "Who are we, anyway?" These questions throw the American citizen back on what has been going on for a long time that has brought us to this point - a point at which the national focus is unable to turn away from the evidence - the stench, if you will - of our own system's decay. It is, after all, our system. When we loved it, it was easy to call it ours. Now that we no longer love it, we must still take responsibility for it. We have always been able to live with a certain degree of corruption as "just politics" or "business as usual." How many times have we heard from a politician: "Democracy is messy." Big mistake...our self-deception and hypocrisy are coming home to roost...and the rest of the world has seen it coming and are taking steps to distance themselves from it and protect themselves from its dying convulsions. In the long run, it will be good. Facing oneself, either personally or as a nation, is a healthy exercise. We are facing the truth that a society built on concepts that are fundamentally self-serving eventually must collapse from its own internal rot...so the human spirit can rise again.

Dear Catherine:

It seems to me that oftentimes the results from political and public opinion polls are just fabricated to convince us that something is true. What is your opinion on this?

Yes. Polls are manipulated.

Dear Catherine:

You understand the powers that be much better than the average person on the street. But how often do they still keep you guessing as to what they're really planning?

Always. Things are organic, evolution. They set goals. Move forward by trial and error. Implementation is emergent. Lots of factions. I try to understand where things are likely to go based on fundamental economics as it is one of the organizing principles.
